

REVOLUTION

What if there can be no more revolution? What if there can be no more revolution because our current understanding cannot be surpassed, cannot be upended and overturned? What if our current understanding of what is laughably called the human condition cannot be? And what if our current understanding of how to manage it, politically, economically, globally and locally, is the final goal of all that was called human progress—of history? How pathetic would that be! What if our current understanding of the environmental crisis and of the coming events is simply what we cannot think past? What if, finally, it is in our situation that information lies? What if the intelligence is there and not in us to transform our current situation? But what if there can be no more revolution?

plug in the street